ROSE NURSERY

Dear Customer:

What a happy year this has been, meeting many new patrons and renewing old acquaintances! Then there is the fun of watching the many new roses in the test block. The rose industry is certainly keeping pace with the trend of the day. Of the newest roses, we are listing 17 which we consider the most outstanding. In the list you will find several with an unusual charming blend of colors, which we feel sure you, too, will delight in having in your own garden.

We have the largest field of roses we have ever grown, and the stock was never better. Many told us last year the standard roses were the best they had ever seen; this holds true of all types of roses this year.

It is a pleasure to send you our catalogue and we look forward to hearing from you this season.

Cordially yours,

Clyde & Ramona Stocking

See pages 8 and 9 for a complete listing of varieties and their color, height, habit and adaptability.

PLANTING AND CULTURAL HINTS

Open package as soon as received. If the roots are moist the plants may be planted at once. If, however, they appear dry, soak in water over night, and bury in a trench. Cover with earth and soak thoroughly. In three or four days the bushes will be ready to plant.

Cut off all bruised or broken roots with a sharp knife.

Loosen all labels, so as not to cut into plant.

Select a location free of tree or shrub roots, and exposed to at least half a day of sun.

Dig a hole 18" to 24" in depth and width. If soil does not have good drainage, a gravel drain should be provided.

A mixture of 10% peat, 10% rotted manure, 5% alfalfa leaf meal or compost mixed thoroughly with 75% top soil, will give excellent results. If drainage is poor, do not use manure.

Fill the hole half full of the mixture and firm well. Make a cone-shaped mound in center of hole, Fig. 1. Place crown of roots on cone, spreading roots, Fig. 2. Fill in above roots with soil and fill basin twice with water, Fig. 3. After water has settled, remainder of soil may be filled in, making sure the bud union is level or slightly above the level of the ground. In colder regions the bud union should be 2 inches below the surface of the ground. Mound soil temporarily four or five inches above the bud union to prevent the plant from being dried out by wind, frost heaves, etc., before the new feeding roots are well established. When growth starts, the soil should be removed to just below the bud union. Fig. 4.

All plants are pruned, ready for planting when you receive them. Keep plants well watered all during the growing season.

Should you find a plant that is slower than the others in leafing out, make a frame around it and fill with sopping wet peat practically covering the entire plant. Usually this will bring the plant into full leaf within 10 days.

POLYANTHA and

Polyantha are the small roses usually produced in clusters and commonly called "Baby Roses." Floribunda is a new classification of the larger flowering varieties of the polyanthas which are becoming more popular. They are most effectively used in mass plantings along driveways, walls or for border planting, etc. Floribundas come in a wide range of colors and produce a mass of color over a long period of time. All of those listed are quite free of disease.

Climbers are ideal for a large splash of color on a trellis, a wall, or for covering a fence. Many of them will give you repeat bloom throughout the summer and fall, but nothing like the heavy spring bloom. Ordinarily climbers do not bloom the first year as the blossoms are borne on wood that is two years old. Cutting the dead blossoms off and leaving three to four leaves, as you do on bush roses, will aid in giving better repeat bloom. Climbers should not be pruned the first year in the garden. Pruning may start their second or third year and consists of removing several of the older and woodier canes. You will get more bloom if the canes are trained so that they are parallel with the ground.
